Emergencies

In the case of an emergency you should dial 999 or 112 (which is the European Emergency Number)

When should I call 112?

Call 112 in any emergency where an ambulance, fire brigade or police are needed.

You can make 112 calls from landlines, public telephones and mobiles and they are free of charge.

What happens when I call the emergency services?

An operator will answer your call. You should give your name, address and telephone number. This helps the operator to identify callers in case the same incident has been reported by other people.

I witnessed a crime. What should I do?

You should contact your local Garda Station or call the Garda Confidential Line.

Garda Confidential Line is a Free Phone number which allows you to leave information on criminal activities confidentially on a voice recorder, so you do not speak to any person.

All details given are handled in the strictest confidence:
